The latest Keystone Poll shows the state's voters are paying close attention to this year's election campaigns. Nearly nine in ten (89\%) registered voters claim they are certain to vote and more than half (56\%) say they are "very interested" in the campaign. These numbers are higher than in previous elections. For example, a September 2000 Keystone Poll showed that 80 percent of registered voters were certain to vote and only two in five (43\%) were "very interested" in the race. These indicators suggest voter turnout will be higher than it was in 2000.

The Presidential Campaign

The Keystone Poll currently shows John Kerry leading President Bush by a six point margin, 48 percent to 42 percent (Figure 1). Most voters who have made up their minds are certain about their presidential choice, as 94 percent of Bush voters and 92 percent of Kerry voters say they are certain to vote for their candidate.

Kerry leads Bush in almost every region of Pennsylvania, with two important exceptions. Bush leads in Central Pennsylvania, a traditionally Republican part of the state that houses a large share of the state's voters (see Table A-1). He also has a slight lead over Kerry in four counties in southeastern Pennsylvania, a Republican area that supported Democratic presidential candidates Bill Clinton and Al Gore. Given past performance, the candidate that eventually carries the Southeast will likely win the state.

One feature of this campaign that has interested many observers is how many voters who supported the President in 2000 will defect to John Kerry. The Keystone Poll finds that 79 percent of those who voted for President Bush plan to vote for him again, while 11 percent plan to vote for John Kerry. Only five percent of Gore voters plan to vote for President Bush this time, while 88 percent plan to vote for John Kerry.

Voters who support John Kerry say that the economy (27\%) and the situation in Iraq (24\%) are the most important reasons they are voting for him. Supporters of President Bush are most likely to cite terrorism and homeland security (46\%) as the main reason they support his re-election (see Table 1).

Table 1. Most Important Issue in Determining Presidential Vote

|  | George Bush | John Kerry |
| :--- | :---: | :---: |
| Terrorism and homeland security | $46 \%$ | $5 \%$ |
| The economy | $17 \%$ | $27 \%$ |
| Something else | $12 \%$ | $12 \%$ |
| The situation in Iraq | $8 \%$ | $24 \%$ |
| Health care (including Medicare) | $6 \%$ | $16 \%$ |
| American jobs and foreign competition | $6 \%$ | $9 \%$ |
| Taxes | $3 \%$ | $2 \%$ |
| Education | $2 \%$ | $4 \%$ |

President Bush is running behind in the state due in large part to his low job performance ratings. Only two in five (43\%) voters believe he has done a good enough job as president to deserve re-election, versus more than half (53\%) who believe it is time for a change. One of the most significant facts of the President's hard re-elect score is that a majority of residents of Southeastern Pennsylvania believe it is time for a change (Table A2). Moreover, only 46 percent of Pennsylvania voters believe he has done an excellent or good job as President, while 54 percent rate his job performance as only fair or poor.

Figure 2 displays how well Pennsylvania believe each of eight characteristics describe the presidential candidates. Bush has a clear advantage over Kerry in regard to his willingness to say what he believes-two in three voters say that characteristic describes the President well. Kerry's advantage is that he is perceived to care about every day people. Most of the other characteristics are attributed to both candidates in similar proportions.

The US Senate Race in Pennsylvania

Pennsylvania’s incumbent US Senator, Republican Arlen Specter, continues to hold a comfortable lead over his Democratic challenger, Representative Joe Hoeffel. Currently, Specter leads Hoeffel, 53 percent to 26 percent, with about one in five (19\%) voters still undecided in the race. Specter's lead comes primarily from his better name recognition in the Commonwealth. Nearly nine in ten (89\%) voters have heard of Specter while only about one in four (27\%) have heard of Hoeffel. Hoeffel must increase his name recognition among Pennsylvania’s voters if he hopes to make the race more competitive.

If the election for U.S. Senate was being held today and the candidates were Arlen Specter, the Republican and Joe Hoeffel, the Democrat, and Jim Clymer, the Constitutional Party Candidate would you vote for...

Yet, even though Specter holds a comfortable lead over his opponent, there are several factors that suggest this race will become much closer as the campaign continues into the fall. First, Specter is currently doing better among Democrats than Hoeffel (see Table A-3). Although Arlen Specter has traditionally done very well with the state's Democratic voters, one would expect Hoeffel to gain some advantage among Democrats as he becomes better known to them. A second concern for Senator Specter may come from the candidacy of Jim Clymer, the Constitution Party candidate for Senate, who at the moment poses no immediate threat. An experiment conducted in this Keystone Poll shows that Clymer takes voters away from the incumbent. With Clymer on the ballot, Specter leads 51 to 26 with four percent going to Clymer. Without Clymer on the ballot, Specter's lead is 54 to 27. Although the difference is small with Clymer on the ballot, it may increase if Clymer becomes better known.

The potential difficulty Specter faces from Clymer is an artifact of Specter’s bruising primary battle with conservative Pat Toomey. Nearly one in ten Toomey voters (9\%) are planning to vote for Clymer and another one in four (23\%) are planning to vote for Hoeffel. Currently, Specter leads among self-described conservatives, but it is worth watching to see if that lead decreases as Clymer becomes better known.

Methodology. This release summarizes the findings of a survey of 660 registered voters in Pennsylvania conducted by Franklin and Marshall College's Center for Opinion Research. The survey interviewing was conducted between August 2 and August 15, 2004. The Keystone Poll was conducted over a slightly longer time frame than normal in order to track any changes in the race that may have been created by the Democratic National Convention. Figure A-4 shows the five day centered averages for the Presidential race during the poll's field period. The sample error for the total sample is plus or minus 3.8 percent. The cooperation rate for the poll is $83 \% .{ }^{1}$ Telephone numbers were generated via random digit dialing. A respondent was randomly selected from within each household. Respondents were screened to determine registration status.

[^0]:    ${ }^{1}$ In 2000, AAPOR proposed a standardized classification system for final disposition of sample cases, and a series of formulas that use these codes to define and calculate the various rates. AAPOR defines cooperation rate as the proportion of all cases interviewed of all eligible units ever contacted. Outcome response definitions are presented in The American Association for Public Opinion Research. 2004. Standard Definitions: Final Dispositions of Case Codes and Outcome Rates for Surveys. Ann Arbor, Michigan: AAPOR; or online at http://www.aapor.org/default.asp?page=survey methods/standards and best practices/st andard definitions.
